The expression a < b < c is an expression in a symbolic language, which we assume by default to be algebra. When we render it verbally, we have several choices. First, and simplest, we can vocalize the symbols. However, for any linguistic expression that has meaning to other human beings, there are semantics that connect the symbols to other shared meanings.

In materials management, ABC analysis is an inventory categorization technique. ABC analysis divides an inventory into three categories—"A items" with very tight control and accurate records, "B items" with less tightly controlled and good records, and "C items" with the simplest controls possible and minimal records. The ABC analysis provides a mechanism for identifying items that will have a significant impact on overall inventory cost, while also providing a mechanism for identifying ...
