POLEMICS: CHRISTIAN-MUSLIM POLEMICS. The Qur ? ? n itself determines the polemic area between Muslims and Christians, because it states the terms and sets the limits of Christian error. The issues it defines have been disputed ever since: God is not three; Jesus is not the Son of God; he was not crucified (cf. surah 4:157, 171), and the Bible has been falsified and misinterpreted.

Some Neglected Aspects of Medieval Muslim Polemics against ...

Christian polemics and apologetics in Europe during the Middle Ages were primarily directed inwards, either against "heretics," such as the Cathars, or between Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox. A subset of polemic and apologetic activity continued against Judaism and Islam, both openly in Christian Europe and more circumspectly in the pre-Ottoman and Ottoman lands.

Christian polemics and apologetics in the Middle Ages ...

During the early centuries of Islam, the Bible did not usually receive specific attention from Muslim polemicists. Among those who did refer to it, some rejected the text on the grounds that it was corrupt, and developed accounts of how the original injil had been lost and replaced by the canonical Gospels.

Looking at the works of Celsus, Porphyry, and Julian the Apostate, Hargis (church history and New Testament Greek, Western Seminary, Los Gatos, California) begins with the criticism of Christian exclusivity. He traces the evolution from a rhetoric of radical distinction to one of rhetorical assimilation in a sophisticated attempt to expose the contradictions and inconsistencies in Christianity.

Against the Christians: The Rise of Early Anti-Christian ...

The arrival of Muslim rulers who were insistent on the unity of God among Christians who testified to the unity of God in His triune nature introduced a considerable challenge to those Christians who were in the ascendancy throughout the Middle East. Now they were on the defensive, needing to stem the movement of members of their own community to Islam which would eventually lead to Muslims becoming the majority.

During the Middle Ages many polemical texts originated outside Catholic Europe in lands where Jews and Christians were on an even footing as subjects of Islam. Among the oldest anti-Christian texts with polemic intent is the Toledot Yeshu "Life of Jesus" (7th century), although this does not follow the reasoned format of argument found in a true polemic or apologetic work.

Jewish polemics and apologetics in the Middle Ages - Wikipedia

In the 13th century an Orthodox bishop by the name of Paul of Sidon wrote a brief apologetic letter known as a 'Letter to a Muslim Friend'. The premise of the letter was that many verses of the Quran supported Christianity and Christian doctrine. Anyone familiar with the Quran knows it says positive things about Jesus, monks and the Gospels.
