The current volume represents a revival of Arabic translation and terminology studies. These disciplines have been dominated by Western scholarship in recent decades, but in truth their historical tradition as a whole owes a great debt to Arabic scholarship. The first systematic translation activity ever organized was under the Abbasids in Baghdad in the 9th Century CE, and Arabic domination continued for several centuries before the tide turned. In this collection, the importance of the ongoing translation and terminology movement in the Arab world is revealed through the works of some of the most distinguished scholars, who investigate a wide range of relevant topics from the making of the first ever Arabic monolingual dictionary to modern-day localization into Arabic. Arabic terminology standardization as well as legal, medical, Sufi and Quranic terms – issues with both cultural and economic ramifications for the Arab world – are thoroughly examined, completing the solid framework of this rich tradition that still has a lot to offer.

Abstract: A bilingual dictionary of medical vocabulary, with translations from Spanish to English and vice versa, was prepared to meet the communication needs of Southwestern medical personnel and their patients. The dictionary is designed to help the Spanish-speaking patient describe his medical problem, and provides regional knowledge not easily accessible to the non-native health care worker. Terms of special ethnic significance and colloquial usage from the actual speech of the area have been selected. Included are 1200 separate entries in English and 1300 in Spanish arranged alphabetically and consisting of definition, part of speech, gender, equivalent medical term, sentence using the term, and sentence translation. Commonly used lay words from folk medicine were preferred to highly technical, scientific cognates which may not be understandable in either language.

This report by the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) Working Group on Patient Information focuses on three main issues: to advise on strategies to improve the quality of information provided with medicines within the regulatory environment to meet patients needs; to propose criteria to assess and monitor the quality of patient information to ensure the safe and appropriate use of medicines; and to advise on key cases which could impact significantly on public health and which will set standards for other products. A number of recommendations are made in relation to the following issues: patient involvement; the quality of patient information leaflets (PILs); risk communication; accessibility of information about medicine taking; regulatory needs; patients needs; public awareness aspects; and impact assessment.
